REIGN OF TERROR SWEEPS NANKING

CHINESE WHO ARE MINUS QUEUES IMMEDIATELY DEBARRED—NEW PREMIER IN OFFICE.

Shanghai, Nov. 16.—A veritable reign of terror prevails in Nanking, according to late dispatches from that city, under the dominance of General Chang Jen Gun, the victor who has been restored to the throne. A systematic search is being made for Chinese who have discarded their queues and all found are beheaded.

The Chinese in Shanghai are making vigorous preparations to attack Nanking, and at a meeting last night, volunteers were called upon to undertake the assassination of Chang. Dr. Cui Hui, a prominent physician, visited Nanking yesterday and endeavored to induce the general to agree to an armistice. General Chang refused to entertain the idea, and declared that he must be loyal to the Emperor.

He said that he intended to lead his troops and recapture Yu Chow and Shanghai for the throne.

Peking, Nov. 16.—Yuan Shi Kai has accepted the premiership and will assume office probably today (Thursday). Yesterday's official gazette contained an expression of thanks from Yuan Shi Kai to the throne for his appointment, but the truth is that he did not undertake the task without receiving guarantees that he would have practically a free hand in conducting affairs while he remained his official position.

The new premier yesterday received several foreign ministers and the United States minister to China, Wm. J. Calhoun. In conversation Yuan Shi Kai said he intended to form a cabinet immediately and endeavor to carry on the government by gaining the support of all major parties as possible allowing the remainder their independence for the time being.

It would be his policy, he said, to gradually to win back their allegiance. Another important development in the capital was the issuance of medals yesterday, ordering Mr. Liang, former victor of Manchuria, to assume command at Jehol, where he summer residence of the Emperor is situated. Yuan Shi Kai is in the place of Pu Liang, the former general. This appointment had led to the belief that the court may intend to use the support of Mr. Liang as chief executive until the opportunity of reversing the court to re-assume a measure of authority. Sun Yat-sen, the victor of Shan Tung, has been elected president of the Republic which has been proclaimed in that province. His acceptance of this office is in accordance with the government's advice and several other victors have come with the people, in the hope of influencing the provinces later to rejoin their allegiance. The provincial assembly at Chi Kai has adopted a memorial to the throne in favor of the establishment of a Republic with Yuan Kai as president.

WRECKER OF NAVY IS FOUND GUILTY

Halifax, Nov. 16.—Lieutenant Lord Allister Graham was today found guilty of court martial of causing, or suffering to be caused, the stranding of H.M.C.S. Niobe on July 30th, last, on the dangerous ledge of the Cape Sable. He was sentenced to be reprimanded. Lord Allister Graham was the officer of the watch up to fifteen or twenty minutes of the time the cruiser went ashore.

The proceedings began at 9:30 this morning and lasted until 9:30 this evening. The witnesses included Commander W. B. McDonald of the Niobe and Lieutenant Lord Allister Graham. The evidence tended to show an absence of any deliberate negligence on the part of the accused, it developed the fact that he had not been attentive to duty as he should have been. He was well aware of the existence of the Cape Sable ledge and the time they should be discernible from the ship, but this time passed and the lights were not seen. He did not immediately report the fact to Commander McDonald or the navigating officer.

Merely a Black Mark. Lieutenant Lord Allister Graham is presenting his defense mainly on the fact that it was unfair to hold him responsible for the stranding of the ship when he had been relieved of the watch about twenty minutes before the accident occurred. Lieutenant Graham's reputation was nothing more than a black mark for him in the matter for up to the present. This appointment had led to the belief that the court may intend to use the support of Mr. Liang as chief executive until the opportunity of

LAURIER AND BORDEN HAVE VERBAL BATTLE

Former Scores Hon. Monk for Chance of Front Towards Dr. Sproule—Premier Borden Wins Under Scathing Attack—How Members Are Seated

(Special to The Capital.) Ottawa, Nov. 16.—T. St. Sproule, Esq., Oshawa, was elected speaker today without opposition. Only Sir Wilfrid and one or two others have been members as long as the new speaker. Sir Wilfrid suggested that as the government had come to power on an ultra-imperial policy, it might have followed imperial precedent and elected the former speaker, Hon. Mr. Maclellan. When this was not done, he had no fault to find with the selection made except that he knew the speaker proposed to be an extreme Tory. That, however, was his misfortune rather than his fault. He could not help it.

Sir Wilfrid hoped that as he ascended the steps to the speaker's chair, he would leave partisan preference behind. He drew attention to the fact that the minister of public works, Mr. Monk, who was supporting the election of Dr. Sproule to the highest position in the House of Commons, had for months before and during the recent campaign attacked him violently and continuously for his connection with the Orange order. The country now had the true measure of the principles of the Nationalists, or what they called their principles.

Hon. Mr. Borden replied with much less showing that Sir Wilfrid's shot had struck home.

Two Vacant Seats. (Western Associated Press.) Ottawa, Nov. 16.—There were very few vacant seats in the House of Commons at three o'clock, the interest attaching to the change of government having been sufficient to bring practically all the members to the capital for the opening day. Premier Borden was over in the Senate, but the majority of his colleagues were in their places.

The first case, that against Lieutenant White, navigating officer, was called but was adjourned until tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock. This case will likely occupy a whole day, as will the case of Commander McDonald which follows.

The court martial was concluded with all the old-time ceremony of naval affairs of the kind. The members of court as well as all the witnesses were attired in full dress uniform. The court consisted of the president of the court, Captain Lewis C. Baker, H. M. S. Berwick; Captain John A. Brown, H. M. S. Essex; Captain John P. C. Cook, Commander Treadwell, H. M. S. Donagel; Commander Albert G. Scott.

Lord Allister Graham, who is tall and spare with an exceptionally high and broad forehead and clear blue eyes, sat beside his counsel, both out the proceedings. It was shortly after 9:30 when the court was convened in the captain's dining room on board the Niobe by Rear Admiral Bradford, commander of the fourth cruiser squadron, who, however, was not present in person.

The entry of Premier Borden into the Commons chamber with the members was, of course, made the occasion for a hearty demonstration. They pounded their desks vigorously and then rose in their feet and cheered again and again. When the Premier rose to nominate Dr. Sproule for the speakership, he was greeted with more clapping and cheering.

MR. BLACKETT'S IDEAS ON MUNICIPAL GOVERNMENT

With all due respect to Mr. J. St. Clair Blackett and without intending in any way to disparage in the slightest his public spirit, it must be said that his ideas of municipal government are very much awry, to say the least. If a literal application of such ideas did cause something akin to a revolution among the ratepayers of Edmonton it would be because they are more lacking in spirit than the residents of Russia or Thibet.

Mr. Blackett's idea, in a nutshell, is that the citizens should elect one man as mayor, that the board of trade should appoint another man and that the federal government should appoint a third, and that these three should be endowed with power to appoint an administrative and executive body of six, who might be called commissioners or anything that anyone chose to call them, but whose office would be that of managers of the city's affairs. On this board the mayor would act, but no other elected officer, and the powers of the board would be legislative, executive and administrative.

Just exactly where the general public, who pay the bills, would come in under Mr. Blackett's scheme is not made plain. Certainly not on the board of control, which would select the management board, for two-thirds of this board would be arbitrarily appointed. And certainly not on the management board, because six-sevenths of this board would be arbitrarily appointed by the board of control, a majority of which would be entirely out of reach of the general public.

By what process of reasoning Mr. Blackett decides that the right to name the board of control should be taken out of the hands of the ratepayers is not made plain. He should have explained with what particular qualifications the board of trade is endowed which peculiarly suit it to performing the function of selecting a member of the board of control, a function which, it seems, it is not safe to entrust to the general public. He should also have explained why, after a thousand years of struggle on the part of the human race to wrest from central authority the right to control local affairs, the citizens of Edmonton should reverse all the teachings of history and go back to the federal government with a request that they assume one-third control of the business of the city.

Mr. Blackett speaks of a recall, but does not make it plain who should be subject to recall. As the mayor is to be the only elected official on either the board of control or on the management board, it is to be presumed that the public might be given the right to recall him. But recalling him could not effect any change or remove any dissatisfaction, as he would have only a one-third voice on the board of control and a one-seventh voice on the board of management.

If it is meant that the public should have the right to recall the other members of the board of control, then what becomes of Mr. Blackett's fundamental principle that the public is not safe to elect its own board of trade? And how many appointments would the board of trade or the federal government ever be able to make stand up?

And if it is the board of management which is to be subject to the recall, how does it come that the public which cannot be entrusted to elect commissioners can be entrusted to recall them.

Certainly, Mr. Blackett has some very hazy and tangled ideas on commission government, recall, council control and the fundamental principles of municipal democracy. Nevertheless he has done the city a service by getting the question of a modern charter before the citizens, and for this he is entitled to a hearty vote of thanks. Now let us have the ideas of whoever imagines he can improve on Mr. Blackett's proposition.

WHAT THE FROGNOSTICATORS SEE IN STORE FOR EDMONTON

The Toronto Telegram sees the point when it says that not another dollar should be spent on the Georgian Bay canal until it is noted what the effect will be of the completion of the Panama canal. The Telegram believes that wheat grown in as far east as Regina will go by the western route.

Agnes Laut, writing in the Saturday Evening Post, says that not less than two hundred million of dollars are being spent on Pacific coast harbors against the day when the Sunset Doorway will become the new front door of the continent and every harbor from San Diego to Prince Rupert will be swarmed with the freighters of Europe.

Chas. M. Hays says that the Grand Trunk Pacific proposes to reach the Pacific Coast contemporaneously with the completion of the canal and that this road alone will carry one hundred million bushels of wheat to the Pacific coast.

J. M. Cornwall points out that not one mile of steel was laid until yesterday north of the geographical centre of the province of Alberta, that the northern wheat limitation is unknown and that there are sixty-five million acres of wheat land in the Peace river alone, an area of land capable of producing more wheat than is now produced on the entire continent.

All all these together and what is the answer? If it does not mean that Edmonton is to become one of the greatest cities on the North American continent, then all the best prognostications of the world are laboring under a most unfortunate hallucination.

PREMIERS TO HOLD CONFERENCE TODAY

PREMIER SCOTT, AND PROVINCIAL
TREASURER CALDER WILL MEET PREMIER Sifton.

Hon. Walter Scott, premier of Saskatchewan and J. Calder, Saskatchewan's provincial treasurer are in Edmonton today in most Premier Sifton for the purpose of discussing matters of mutual interest to the two provinces. They arrived in the city last night and are staying at the Alberta hotel. Speaking to a Capital representative this morning, Premier Scott said that there was nothing of public interest in connection with his and Mr. Calder's visit to the Alberta capital.

In answer to a query as to what steps the Saskatchewan government has taken since the new Dominion government has come into office, with a view of securing provincial control of natural resources, Premier Scott said that a communication had been sent to Ottawa in the form of a reminder that a resolution had been passed by the provincial legislature, endorsing the change in the administration of the province's natural assets, and asking that the government act as speedily as possible.

Premier Scott and Mr. Calder will return to Saskatchewan tonight.

THREE TENANTS ARE PLACED ON LIST

TWENTY-EIGHT NAMES ADDED TO
VOTERS' LIST IN THE COURT OF REVISION.

With the filing of the city commissioners as a board of revision final touches were made to the voters' list and within a few days the complete ballot roll in printed form will appear. The sittings of the court of revision yesterday afternoon resulted in twenty-eight more voters on the list than were previously upon it. There were twenty-nine appeals from the list, and the court assessor and all but one were allowed by the commissioners. This one exception proved to be a "wager" in the discretion of the commissioners and his name was rejected.

But four applicants for enfranchisement were made under the provisions of the tenant's franchise act, three of them were put on the list and one rejected.

Much work of the court of revision consisted in striking off names that had inadvertently been included. That is, they were doubly qualified to vote and appeared twice. There were thirty-two names in this class. In its finished form the voters' list will appear in an alphabetical order by residential business, business and tenant qualifications follow directly after each list of businesses. The purpose of separating the last category of the list is to place the business rate payers and tenant voters to facilitate the work of returning officers when referred by taxes are being submitted.

In this action, which came up for trial before a justice of the supreme court of Alberta, Elizabeth C. Evans, daughter of Edward Evans, sued for possession of six hackney horses. The horses were brought from England by Edward Evans, and passed upon his farm in Hemphills. Miss Evans claimed them as her own, and was successful in her action to secure ownership of the animals. That they were originally her property was admitted, but the defendant claimed that he had purchased them from her in England. This, he was unable to prove to the satisfaction of the court. Spy Fever Becomes Epidemic in Germany

Not Safe for Innocent Traveler to Spend His Time Taking Photographs of Sand Dunes Along the North Sea, As Arrest May Follow

(By Carl Woldemar)

Berlin, Nov. 16.—Spy fever has become epidemic in Germany, and details of a fresh interesting case are supplied by the "Tagblatt." According to information received by this journal, the officials at the observation station of Hornum, on the North Sea island Sylt, noted at the end of October a curious three-legged instrument among the sand dunes and seemingly taking photographs of the surrounding landscape. This procedure naturally so it is stated, produced great excitement and the consequence was that the police authorities, of Westerland, the chief town on the island, were informed by telegram of the mysterious incident, and a full description of "the individual" and his extraordinary apparatus sent to them. The burgmaster of Westerland took the matter up with considerable zeal, and ordered a police sergeant and 20 soldiers to watch the suspicious person. The strenuous efforts of the two officials were crowned with success, for the suspicious individual was discovered quietly walking down the main street of Westerland, and offered no opposition when told that he must consider himself under arrest.

The prisoner declared that he was a harmless visitor from Bremen who was seeking recreation from the sea-breeze of Sylt and enjoying his leisure in taking photographs of the scenery. This statement, says the "Tagblatt," could naturally not be credited, and the two officials returned in the first place with the prisoner to his room in a local hotel, where they confiscated the photographic apparatus and plates they found there, and then told him he must accompany them to the burgmaster. The zealous police sergeant stuck tightly to his side on the way to the burgmaster's office, the detective took charge of the confiscated photographic apparatus. At the latter's house the burgmaster submitted the prisoner to a searching examination, demanded to see his papers, and ordered the plates found on his person to be developed. As not a little of evidence that he was a spy was found the prisoner was set at liberty.

The "Tagblatt" observes that every German must be filled with pride when he learns that the eye of the law penetrates even the sand dunes of Sylt, but that he must find it, to say the least, awkward to be arrested in the open street and to be conducted to his hotel by a policeman in uniform when he believes he is merely enjoying his holiday. Nothing good, it adds, comes of overcaution and of exaggerated fear of espionage, and German tourists should, therefore, bear in mind that they run great risk in photographing desolate sand dunes on the shores of the North Sea.

The Socialists will bring in an interpretation in the Reichstag asking the government what it proposes to do toward relieving the distress arising from the enormous advance in the cost of food. In view of the state of popular feeling on this subject and the imminence of the elections, the discussion of the question promises to be scarcely less interesting than that upon Monaca, and quite as embarrassing to the government, which can offer no definite assurance of relief. The Chancellor who should attempt to remove the restriction extending the limitation of foreign loans—one of the chief socialist demands—would involve the enmity of the entire Conservative-Agrarian elements. Herr Bebel and his followers will be able to wage the coming election largely on the issue of their food. A more effective and popular campaign issue they could hardly desire.

After a short and peaceful debate, the Reichstag read a first time and sent to a special committee the new bill providing for the compulsory insurance of employees. The purpose of the bill is to extend—without state aid—the advantages of compulsory insurance against invalidity and old age to practically all categories of employed persons who are not subject to the provisions of the "workmen's" insurance scheme and whose incomes do not exceed $120 a year.

It is estimated that the new law will affect just over two millions of employees. The contributions of employers and employees will be equal, and according to the government bill, are graduated up to a "maximum" joint contribution of 3 per cent of the insured income.

The details of the bill will probably undergo considerable alterations in committee, but in view of the unanimity of all parties about the principles of the bill, its passage this session seems to be assured.

The "Kaiserliche Zeitung" declares that there is no truth in the statement that negotiations are in progress between London and Berlin concerning the question of restricting naval construction. Germany intends to carry out her naval program without any deviation whatever. In their efforts to achieve variety Germany theatre managers are turning to the classics and experimenting with

ASKED HER DRUGGIST TO GIVE HER SOMETHING.

She Had a Bad Cold, So He Recommended Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup.

Mrs. James Warren, Edmonston, Minn., writes:—Just a few words in favor of your Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. A short time ago I contracted a bad cold, and tried several remedies, but had no good results. I asked my druggist to give me some good cough medicine he could recommend, so he told me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and I can safely say I have never tried anything like it. The first dose gave me relief, and I was completely cured of my cold before I had finished one bottle. It is the best cough remedy I have ever tried, and I can recommend it to everyone.

Obstinate coughs and colds yield to the grateful, soothing action of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup.

It is a remedy without an equal for coughs, colds, bronchitis, and all affections of the throat or lungs.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pints, three half pints, and 25 cents.

plays that long ago passed from popular memory. The Berlin playbills give striking evidence as to the sincerity of this desire to get away from conventional routine. At two of the local theatres there are rival productions of Kleist's tragedy of ancient Troy, "Helenes," both elaborately staged.

Max Reinhardt is following his production of "Egipptus," with a performance of the "Orchestra" of Aeschylus. The patrons of another playhouse are enjoying the "Antikone" of Sophocles, and at one of the Royal theatres a drama of the Spanish past, Calderon's "Chrysothos and Daria," is on the boards.

"RUZZIELAMB" CASE

"Ruzzielamb" Trial. Helen Woodruff Smith, sketched in court, and Russell Griswold, who is suing Miss Smith for $50,000 for alleged breach of promise. Griswold testified on the witness stand in the Supreme Court in the city of New York that Miss Smith promised to marry him when he was only eighteen years of age, and submitted to the court and jury tender love missives written by Miss Smith, who is fair and forty, in which she called Griswold her "little Ruzzielamb" and other endearing terms. During the plaintiff's recital of his heart burnings, the matronly defendant smiled and seemed to be highly amused at the witness' apparent earnestness to get a money bribe for his shattered affections.

SCHOOLBOY DUEL IN GERMAN TOWN

YOUTH OF FATHERLAND SHOW PRECIOUS TENDENCY TO BE INFLUENCED BY METHODS OF EDUCATION

(Globe Cable Service.)
Berlin, Nov. 16.—The remarkable duel, which took place between two Rudolfstul schoolboys, resulting in the death of one and serious injury to the other, is an illustration of the morbid precocity fostered by German methods of education at high pressure, and also of the hold which the custom of duelling has on the youth of the country.

The boys, Hans von Necker, aged 16, and Harry Dietzen, aged 15, were both students at the Rudolfstul Gymnasium, of higher grade school and were bosom friends. Both entertained literary aspirations, and were accustomed to spend hours together every day, reading together and discussing each other's literary attempts, and were known among their school fellows as sworn chums.

Jealousy Kills Friendship.
Recently, however, a shadow had fallen across their friendship. At the dining class they made the acquaintance of a girl who inspired romantic sentiments in both their youthful breasts. In consequence the relations between them became strained, and a crisis was reached when on Monday, Dietzen, while taking a walk with the girl in question, was stopped in the street by his friend, in the altercation which ensued, Necker addressed an insulting remark to Dietzen's companion, and the latter at once demanded an immediate withdrawal of the words or a "fencing." Necker refused to withdraw the offending remark, and the two youths agreed between themselves to go to a lonely spot outside the town to settle their "affair of honor" with pistols.

The boys went out of town together to a lonely spot some four miles away. Here, without seconds or witnesses, the duel took place. Dietzen was armed with a revolver, while his adversary carried an old-fashioned, double-barreled pistol. Diving themselves of their coats and waistcoats, the two youthful duellists each aimed to his shirt over the heart, a crimson blow as a mark for his rivals pistol, for they were determined that the duel should be to the death.

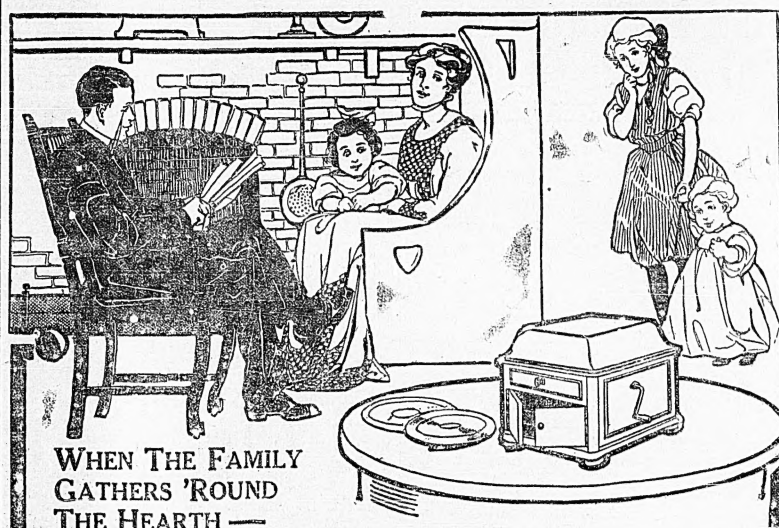

Survivor Attempts Suicide.
At twenty paces' distance, Dietzen, as the challenger, opened fire. His first bullet missed, and Necker replied and also missed. Then followed a further exchange of shots, in which Necker sank to the ground hit in the breast. In agony, he called out to his friend, "Hurry, shoot again," Dietzen approached to close quarters and gave his rival the "coup de grace," or sending a bullet straight through the cranium how which covered his friend's heart.

ATLANTIC FLIGHT

Snapshot of the dirigible balloon, Akron, flying over Atlantic City on its flight, with its inventor, Capt. Melvin Vaniman, at the helm. The monster airship cut all sorts of capers in the air, and after racing at express rate speed, finally landed on some mud flats inland from Atlantic City, and the crew had to be carried off by life savers. The dirigible was safely brought back to the hangar, where the inventor is perfecting any defects that may have developed during its first trial flight. Mr. Vaniman hopes to cross the Atlantic ocean in the balloon in the near future.

THE "HOMBURG" IS A POPULAR HAT

(Globe Cable Service.)

London, Nov. 16.—The soft felt hat known as the Homburg, the favorite headgear of the late King Edward, whose habitual adoption of it must have done much to bring it into vogue among his subjects, is now the most popular hat in London. But it is a mistake to connect its popularity with "the decline of the silk hat"—the use of the unvarying title which annually does duty at this time of the year for the introduction of the same old story. The Homburg is taking the place of the bowler, not of the high silk hat. The soft felt hat is worn with the lounge suit and with the motor get-up, so how can it be said to be causing the taper from its position? What the Homburg is doing is this: It is cutting into the interests of the bowler (dandy) and the two caps, and it is able to do so with the "decline of the silk hat" as with the increase of the price in coats. The silk hat and all its attendant sartorial formalities started on the down line in the city (financial district) and the west end long before the Homburg was even an unquestioned object of the London streets. It was really the cause of "the decline of the silk hat" was a terribly hot summer some years ago, which drove the head-dress stockbroker to the adoption of the straw.

Once this element of informality had entered into the highly-polished gravity, and sprang and spun dignity of the Homburg, other things were followed—such, for instance, as brown shoes, colored socks, light lounge suits and bowlers. And from that time onwards the stockbrokers and their clerks became less and less top-hatted and stick-carrying. But the silk hat has by no means of means become extinct in the city. There are still thousands of firms which adhere to the old formal style.

about the possibility of time dress suits running into fashion, and on referring the matter to a well-known tailor who "makes" for the aristocracy a press representative was told "the possibility is a very real one. At present," he said, "we are not making dress suits of a very noticeable kind; in fact, the color is so dark as to be almost indistinguishable from black. But blue, indeed, they are, and I should not be in the least surprised, going by the nature of certain orders that have been given to me this season by clients who are known to lead fashion to some considerable extent, if the color this year will be quite distinct, like the blue cloth of which our grandfathers' coats were made."

The tailor was asked if he thought the blue would suit the average man, and he was doubtful. "If blue dress suits come into fashion they will soon have to go out again if they are not cut by the very best tailors."
